

Heidi Aggeler is a Managing Director at the women-owned economic consulting firm Root Policy Research. She co-founded Root Policy Research to further the role of applied research in community planning. She enjoys thinking about how markets respond to public policy, and is committed to helping clients address ever-changing economic, housing, and community development needs. Heidi started her research and consulting career as an economic analyst at the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis after graduating from the Humphrey Institute at the University of Minnesota.

Jovan Burton is currently the Director of Implementation for the Partnership for Housing Affordability. Mr. Burton is tasked with executing the solutions of the Richmond Regional Housing Framework in partnership with local governments, developers, key stakeholders, and community groups. This includes managing the Housing Resource Line, ensuring accountability for policy implementation, increasing public education of housing challenges, and partnering with community groups to amplify resident voice. Jovan serves on the board of directors for Area Congregations Together in Service (ACTS), Housing Families First, and the Greater Richmond Continuum of Care.

Carol Dunlap has been working with housing issues, primarily homelessness, since 1983. Carol is employed by GoochlandCares as Family Services Director. Housing is one of GoochlandCares primary focus areas that is supported by programs including Critical Home Repair, Emergency Financial Assistance, and Emergency Housing (shelter for DV and homeless folk). In 2019, GoochlandCares was asked by the community to facilitate HousingGVA, an effort to address wide-ranging housing issues in Goochland County. Carol has championed this effort.

David Sacks has served as Community Development Manager with Henrico County since 2011. He is responsible for administering the County's federal entitlement grant funds (CDBG, HOME, ESG) and the HUD CARES Act funds. He also administers the County's Enterprise Zone program and a variety of revitalization and housing programs. David previously worked for the City of Richmond's Department of Community Development for 22 years and, as Deputy Director, oversaw a variety of community development programs and projects including the development of a new Master Plan, and a new Downtown Plan, and a large number of neighborhood and small area plans. He managed the City's historic preservation program, the neighborhood planning program, and the administration of federal entitlement funds.
